EDL's Note

Dear Students,

As you stand on the threshold of your journey into higher education and career building, it is essential to cultivate a mindset that goes beyond mere textbook learning. Today, I urge you to embrace the spirit of inquiry and to nurture a scientific temper that empowers you to question the world around you. Our everyday experiences and observations are not just facts to be accepted at face value—they are opportunities to explore, understand, and innovate. Ask yourself the “why” and “how” behind even the most ordinary phenomena.

It is in questioning the basic elements of life that you build the robust foundations necessary for success in your future academic and professional pursuits.

A strong scientific temper is not about having all the answers from the outset; it is about developing the courage and curiosity to ask questions, challenge assumptions, and persist in the quest for knowledge. This process is the cornerstone of critical thinking and problem-solving—a skill set that will not only guide you through education but will also serve as a lifelong asset in your career.

Remember, every breakthrough begins with a question. By nurturing your innate curiosity today, you are laying the groundwork for the innovations of tomorrow. Let Upasana serve as a reminder of the immense power of inquiry and the importance of a critical, open mind. Embrace every opportunity to learn, explore, and reinvent the ordinary into the extraordinary.

Wishing you a journey filled with thoughtful questions and meaningful discoveries.

With best wishes,

Harshith Gowda S
